History

Breguet 14 (old Breguet XIV) was a French biplane, which was used as a bomber and reconnaissance aircraft in World War I and after. It was built in large quantities and production continued until 1928. For the first time, a larger amount of duralumin was used in its production, which replaced wood. Therefore, he was very fast, had good maneuverability, was reliable and surpassed many fighters of the time. After the end of World War I, the machine took part in colonial battles in Africa and Asia or the Soviet-Polish war. Several machines were in the arsenal of the interwar Czechoslovak Air Force.
